

Description of the subjects offered in the Department of Islamic Studies

Contents

- 1. Elective University Requirement (3 hours):
- 2. Mandatory department requirements (75 hours):
- 3. Departmental Elective Requirements (9 hours)
- 4. Compulsory college requirements (3 hours):
- 5. Elective college requirements (3 hours) :

0213101 Islamic Culture:

This description includes explaining the concept of Islamic culture , its relationship to science, civilization and urbanity, then clarifying its sources from the Qur'an and Sunnah, and clarifying belief, worship, legislation and ethics, then explaining the Islamic approach to building the individual, family and nation and focusing on contemporary challenges to Islamic culture, such as Zionism, Orientalism, secularism and globalization.

Compulsory major requirements (75 hours):

0213111 Recitation and Memorization

This course aims to enable the student to recite the Holy Quran according to the rules, to learn about the effect of these rules on the meaning, and to memorize specific parts of the Holy Quran.

This course includes: an introduction to the science of Tajweed, its origins, its rules, its importance, the levels of recitation, the rules of seeking refuge, the Basmalah, and Takbir , the rules of the silent Nun and Tanween, the silent Mim, the rules of the doubled Nun and Mim, and the long vowels, with practical training in recitation and memorization, so that the two parts (30 ,29) are memorized while mastering the recitation of the ten parts (.20-21

0213211 Recitation and memorization (2)

This course aims to train the students on the rules of reciting the Qur'an, and to enable them to master recitation and memorization.

This material includes: the points of articulation of letters and their characteristics , emphasis and softening. The rules of silent lams, the rules of identical , similar, homogeneous, and distant idghams, with practical training in recitation , memorizing parts (28 ,27), and mastering the recitation of parts (-11 .20

0213311 Recitation and Memorization (3)

This course aims to master recitation and Tajweed, so that it becomes an acquired skill for the student, and to memorize parts of the Holy Quran with mastery.

This subject includes: the rules of stopping, starting, stopping, and stopping, the rules related to the feminine taa', and the rules of the disconnected and connected, with practical training in recitation and memorizing parts (26 ,25) with mastery of reciting the ten parts from .10-1

Sciences of the Quran :

This course aims to introduce the student to: the foundations of studying the Holy Qur'an , the most important sciences serving to understand the Qur'an , and the history of authorship in the sciences of the Qur'an in terms of the most important books and authors.

The material includes: Definition of the Holy Quran, revelation and its types, how the Quran was revealed and its duration, reasons for revelation, Meccan and Medinan, revelation of the Quran in seven letters, history of the Quran: (writing, compilation, copying), drawing of the Mushaf, readings, abrogating and abrogated, decisive and ambiguous, the miracle of the Quran, translation of the Quran, science of occasions, the Arabized in the Quran, introductions to interpretation, stories of the Quran, its parables and its sections.

0213313Analytical Interpretation

The course aims to: Introduce the student to the concept of analytical interpretation, its origins and importance. The method of analytical interpretation and its best methods. Familiarity with the conditions of the interpreter. The most important issues that should be researched in interpreting verses analytically. The most important sources of analytical interpretation. The most prominent scholars of interpreting in Islamic history.

This course includes : an analytical interpretation of the verses of Surat An-Nisa and Surat An-Noor, through the most important books of analytical interpretation in ancient and modern times. During it, the most important issues of analytical interpretation are addressed, such as: explaining the subject of the Surah, its objectives and occasions, the reasons for revelation, the meanings of vocabulary, some grammatical and rhetorical issues, some doctrinal and jurisprudential rulings, and other interpretive issues. Students are also assigned to read a general interpretation of some verses from one of the brief interpretations to understand their general meanings.

0213419 Interpretation of verses of judgments

This course aims to introduce the student to the verses of rulings, and to interpret them from the most reliable sources of interpretation, both ancient and modern, with a presentation of the evidence of jurists, and to inform the student of the richness of the Holy Quran in the legislative aspect, and the comprehensiveness of its rulings for all aspects of life and all human relationships. And to introduce the student to the most important references and sources for interpreting the verses of rulings in ancient and modern times and how to benefit from them.

This course includes : Explaining the concept of verses of rulings, the importance of knowing and studying verses of rulings, a brief overview of the historical development of writings on verses of rulings, the most important books and authors, studying selected examples of verses of rulings in the Holy Quran through the most prominent references and reliable sources in interpreting verses of rulings in the past and present, reviewing the methods and approaches of scholars in deriving legal rulings from Quranic verses, presenting the evidence of jurists and their preferences and identifying the reasons for their differences in jurisprudential opinions. Explaining the wisdom and benefits derived from verses of rulings and the legal rulings they provide that the student can apply in his practical life.

0213121 Science of Hadith :

This course aims to give the student an idea about the revision of the Prophetic Hadith, the efforts of scholars in preserving the Prophetic Sunnah, and the method of hadith scholars in criticizing the news.

The subject includes: Study of the following topics: Definition of Hadith sciences, Definition of Hadith terminology, Hadith narration and documentation, Origin of Hadith sciences. Hadith categories according to their occurrence: Mutawatir, Ahad, Its categories according to acceptance and rejection: Sahih, Hasan, Daif. Sciences related to the study of the chain of transmission and text: Al-Jarh wa Al-Ta'deel, the science of men, ranks of narrators , methods of transmitting Hadith, etiquette of transmitting Hadith, and the most famous books of Sunnah.

0213223 Biography of the Prophet (Analytical Study):

This course aims to enable students to benefit from the facts of the Prophet's biography in overcoming the problems facing our nation in our contemporary time, through the analytical approach.

Contents of the article: A statement of the methods followed by the authors in writing about the Prophet's biography in general (objective, narrative, subjective, historical, analytical), then a statement of what distinguishes the analytical method from other methods, and the most famous of those who wrote about the analytical method in the Prophet's biography, then a statement of the most prominent events of the Prophet's biography (the secret call, the public call, the first and second pledge of allegiance at Aqaba, the Prophet's migration, the building of the Islamic state (building the mosque, brotherhood, the document), the raids and invasions, the Battle of Badr, the Battle of Uhud, the Treaty of Hudaibiyyah, the Battle of Khaybar and the conflict with the Jews, the conquest of Mecca, the Battle of Mu'tah, and with the hypocrites: the Hadith of Ifk, the Mosque of Harm, the death of the Messenger, may God bless him and grant him peace).

0213422 Graduation and study of chains of transmission:

This course aims to identify the books on the Prophetic Sunnah and its sciences, how to access the Prophetic hadiths in it, and to practice that, and to judge the Prophetic hadiths as authentic or weak.

The material includes: reviewing the methods of authorship among the hadith scholars, studying the graduation based on: the chain of transmission, the subject, the beginnings of the hadith, the word in the hadith, the indexes that were classified for the hadiths. Computer programs, books of men, and studying the most important rules of criticism and modification, and the books that graduate hadiths by studying models of graduation books (Nasb al-Rayah, Talkhis al-Habeer, ...) then training in graduating hadiths practically and judging them.

0213224 The six books: 0213224

This course aims to introduce the student to the six books, their authors, and how to deal with them, by learning about their conditions and methods of writing them.

It includes: explaining the objectives, conditions, and method of each author in his book, with a comparison between the two Sahihs, and a comparison between them and the four Sunans, in terms of the degree of hadiths, and the topics of hadiths, with mention of their most prominent terms in their books, and a statement of the hadith and jurisprudential industry, through studying hadiths from each book, and getting to know the most important explanations of the six books.

0213145 Introduction to Islamic Creed

This course aims to introduce the student to: the concept of religion, religiosity, and nature and the relationship between them, the concept of Islamic doctrine and its importance, the historical development of writing in the science of doctrine. The concept of reason and thought, and explaining how to intellectually receive matters of doctrine through rational contemplation of the wonders of the souls and universes as guided by the verses of the Qur'an. Protecting the student from blind imitation, extremism, and fanaticism in matters of doctrine. Explaining the duty of belief.

This course includes a statement: The concept of religiosity and nature and the relationship between them, human motivations for forming a belief, the concept of belief and the conditions of correct belief, Islamic belief: its importance, the history of its composition , evidence for proving it and methods of establishing it, its characteristics, the relationship between it and Sharia, the concept of reason and thought and their relationship to belief, impact and influence, the concept of personality and behavior, the effect of belief in building the distinctive Islamic personality, a statement of the relationship between thought and behavior, the concept of faith and Islam , a summary of the pillars of faith ‘the origin of disagreement in belief and its impact on the nation ‘the concept of innovation and its types, the phenomenon of excommunication: roots, dangers and treatment.

0213241 Islamic Doctrine : (1)

This course aims to introduce the student to the most important pillars of the Islamic faith, deepen his faith in it, and respond to atheistic theories and doubts raised about matters of faith.

The subject includes: Study of revelation and some pillars of faith in detail: Belief in God Almighty, types of monotheism: Lordship, divinity, names and attributes. Belief in fate and destiny: the concept of fate and destiny, its issues , nullifiers of faith, and mentioning the most important doubts in the topics of faith and responding to them.

0213341 The Islamic Creed (2)

This course aims to introduce the student to the other pillars of faith, which are: belief in : angels, books, messengers, the Last Day. And to explain the most important doubts and responses.

The subject includes: Study of topics: Proving matters of faith, knowing the heavenly books, distortion therein. Miracles, the infallibility of the prophets, the seal of prophethood. Defining angels and their functions. The Last Day: Signs of the Hour, scenes of the Day of Judgment, evidence of resurrection, responding to the doubts of deniers.

0213131 Introduction to Islamic Jurisprudence:

This course aims to introduce Islamic jurisprudence, its history and schools up to the modern era.

Contents of the article: Definition of jurisprudence and its characteristics, its codification, and study of the history of legislation from the era of prophecy to the modern era, including the emergence of the four schools of jurisprudence, and identification of the reasons for the disagreement of jurists , and the emergence of contemporary jurisprudential research assemblies and centers.

0213231 Principles of Jurisprudence (1)

This course aims to introduce the student to the science of the principles of jurisprudence, its subject, its origins, methods of writing in it, and its purpose.

The material includes: an introduction that defines the science of the principles of jurisprudence, then the ruling: (its types and divisions, validity and invalidity, permission and determination), the book: (its argument, its miracle, and its translation, the actions of the Messenger - may God bless him and his family and grant them peace) Legislation, general and specific, their terms and their authority, meanings and their types, terms and their uses, the continuous Sunnah, the famous, the individual, a general idea about prepositions and meanings.

0213331 Principles of Jurisprudence : (2)

This course aims to introduce the student to the sources of Islamic rulings and the types of Islamic rulings.

The article includes: Command and prohibition, an explanation of each of them, their forms, and their significance for Islamic rulings. Consensus: its definition, origin, occurrence, conditions, and types. Analogy: its definition, pillars, scholars' opinions on it, its conditions, the reason and its paths, then an explanation of the secondary evidence from which Islamic rulings are derived, which are: Istihsan: its definition and types, and scholars' opinions on citing it as evidence. Public interest: its definition and divisions, scholars' opinions on citing it, its importance, and the difference between it and analogy and istihsan. Blocking the means: its definition, and scholars' position on citing it as evidence. Custom: its meaning and types, the difference between it and consensus, and the conditions for acting upon it. Istihsab: its definition, types, and evidence.

0213133 Fiqh of worship

This course aims to introduce the student to the recognized schools of jurisprudence, their founders, and their methods of deriving rulings, and to connect students with knowledge of the four schools of jurisprudence, and to develop the student's jurisprudential ability in how to infer legal rulings, and to provide an appropriate conception of worship in Islam by explaining its reality and objectives.

Its contents include chapters from the books: Purification: (Water and its types, impurities and how to remove them, ablution, ritual washing, dry ablution, wiping over socks). Prayer: (its ruling, conditions for its validity, its pillars, its nullifiers, Friday and congregational prayers, Eid prayers, the prayer of the sick). Zakat: (its definition, ruling, conditions for its obligation, the funds on which Zakat is obligatory, its shares and amounts. Its expenditures, Zakat al-Fitr). Fasting: (its definition, ruling, conditions, pillars, nullifiers, those with excuses and what is obligatory for them, ransom and expiation). Hajj: (its definition, ruling, conditions, types, temporal and spatial times, Hajj actions, prohibitions of Ihram, Umrah and its rulings).

0213233 Jurisprudence of Transactions:

This article aims to explain the legal controls for financial transactions, the flexibility of Islamic jurisprudence, the change of fatwas with changes in time and place, and to address the most important financial issues in the modern era.

It includes: An introduction to the basics of financial transactions, types of contracts and their pillars: Contracts relating to ownership: sale, what is permissible and what is forbidden, usury and its types. Contracts relating to benefit: leasing, commission. Contracts relating to work: agency, deposit, murabaha. Types of companies, insurance and its types, stock exchange shares.

0213333 Jurisprudence of Penalties:

This course aims to introduce the student to the characteristics of criminal legislation in Islam, the directives of Islam for the prevention of crime, and the penalties stipulated in Islamic law.

The material includes: Characteristics of criminal legislation in Islam, methods of preventing crime in Islam, legal objectives and preserving them, criminal responsibility and reasons for lifting it, explaining the types of crimes and the prescribed punishments in Sharia (hudud) in its two types: Punishments prescribed for a crime in which a public right is violated: the punishment for apostasy, the punishment for drinking alcohol, the punishment for adultery, the punishment for slander, the punishment for theft, the punishment for highway robbery. Punishments prescribed for a crime in which a person's right is violated: retaliation in the life and less than the life. Punishments for crimes of assault on the fetus, explaining the blood money due in the above, and evidence to prove those crimes. Ta'zir: its concept, amount, divisions and types.

0213236 Personal Status Law:

This course aims to introduce the student to the legal provisions related to regulating family relations in light of the current Personal Status Law.

Its topics include: Marriage contract: definition of marriage and explanation of its ruling, the wisdom of its legitimacy, engagement and the rulings on withdrawing from it, pillars of the marriage contract, conditions of the contract formula, rights arising from the marriage contract, shared rights: inheritance, enjoyment, proof of lineage...), the wife's rights: dowry, maintenance, justice with one wife, and wives in polygamy... . The husband's rights: obedience, and decision-making in the home... . Dissolution of the marriage contract: divorce: wisdom, its legitimacy and its types, khul' and its rulings, separation between spouses for reasons that warrant it, the effects arising from the dissolution of the marriage contract in terms of waiting period and childbirth maintenance.

0213437 Commandments and inheritance

This course aims to familiarize the student with the provisions related to wills and inheritance.

The article includes: Study of the will: its definition, ruling, types, pillars and conditions, its invalidity and revocation, its acceptance and rejection, the conditions of the executor, the legatee and the legatee, the conflict of wills, the obligatory will.

Inheritance: definition, types , causes, pillars, conditions , impediments, rights related to the estate, Owners of fixed shares, agnates, relatives , exclusion, accounting, correcting issues, compensation, rejection, copies , inheritance of a lost fetus , exclusion.

0213334 Contemporary Jurisprudence Issues

This course aims to identify the most important problems of the contemporary Muslim in his life, the jurisprudential issues that are related to contemporary society, and how to find legal solutions for them.

The study includes: Introduction to contemporary issues, the role of jurisprudence and jurists in the life of the Islamic nation, organ donation and transplantation, organ selling, cosmetic surgery, genetic engineering, human cloning, the state of necessity in Islamic law, crimes arising from the use of computers, intellectual property rights, innovation and authorship, patents, credit cards and their legal classification. General guardianship of women. International treaties.

0213134 Principles of Islamic Economics:

This article aims to explain the principles on which the Islamic economy is based, Islam's position on economic activity, the most important means of production, and the state's financial policy.

The subject includes: A study of the general economic activity, the distinction of Islam's economic view from other systems, and the role of the state in economic activity: land ownership, agricultural reform, revival of dead land, exploitation of mineral resources, combating monopoly, pricing. The state's financial policy: zakat and contemporary taxes, kharaj, excise duties, and sections of public spending.

0213242)) Research Methods and Sources of Islamic Studies:

Introducing the student to the importance of scientific research, its goals and methods, starting from thinking about the problem and ending with solving it, and what must be done to complete successful research, from knowledge of the principles of research, the rules of documentation and writing, verifying manuscripts, and dealing with sources. The research includes, in its other part, a theoretical definition and practical training on the sources of Islamic studies and the principles of dealing with them. In addition to introducing the student to electronic sources (CDs) and how to operate them, the Internet, and how to deal with websites dedicated to Sharia sources.

0213335)) Jurisprudence and methods of proof

This course deals with the judiciary, its concept, the difference between it and issuing fatwas, its legitimacy, its ruling, its origin, its types, the conditions of the judge, the powers of the judge, the duties of the judge, the degrees of litigation, the methods of appointing the judge, the end of the judge's term, judicial assistants and their conditions, the independence of the judiciary and its manifestations, the lawsuit, its definition, its pillars, and its conditions. The conflict between evidence and its preference, what the lawsuit is proven by. The acknowledgment, its concept, its authority, its types. The testimony, its concept, its authority, its conditions, the matters by which it is proven. Oath, refusal to take an oath, written evidence, presumption , and the article also includes the subject of Islamic policy.

0213353 Public Speaking and Call

This course includes introducing the student to oratory, its characteristics, sections, and etiquette. Studying the orator as a person and a culture. An overview of the most important sciences related to oratory: such as logic, sociology, psychology, and rhetorical measures. Methods of influencing the audience and directing public opinion. Defining the principles of oratory and teaching, how to prepare the sermon and lesson, and how to perform them. Enabling the student to deliver impromptu sermons and lessons, to work on raising the level of oratory and religious lessons. Introducing the student to the concept of da'wah, knowing its history and methods. And learning about the pillars of da'wah (preacher, invited, invitation). In addition to a textual study of some sermons from different eras. With practical application and group evaluation.

Compulsory supporting materials:

Grammar (1 :(0201112

This course aims to study the basics of grammar, and to revive and develop the student's knowledge, while paying attention to the practical aspect, and enriching it with exercises and applications. It is concerned with studying speech and what it consists of, inflection and construction, original vowels, and subsidiary vowels in the six nouns, duality, sound masculine plural, sound feminine plural, indeclinable nouns, indefinite and definite nouns, nouns (subjects and predicates), and abrogators. The student is to write a research paper on one of the topics of this course, and present it to his colleagues for discussion.

0202333 English for Islamic Studies:

Aims this The course to supply The student Most important Terminology in the sciences Islamic different, especially what Related By the Quran And the year And the invitation And the belief And jurisprudence, And that from Okay Setting up The student To deal with Speakers In English And with Books Islamic In the language English, and includes The course study Texts from The Quran The Generous And the talk The Sheriff And jurisprudence Islamic, And texts Islamic General It means Some Issues Islamic salt , like a woman And terrorism And Jihad Democracy , etc.

English for Islamic Studies 0202333 :

This course aims at providing students with the most important terms in different Islamic sciences, especially in the areas of the Holy Quran, Sunnah, calling for Islam, creed, and jurisprudence. This is done to prepare students to deal with speakers of English and the Islamic books written in English. The course includes studying texts from the Holy Qur'an, the Prophet's traditions, the Islamic Jurisprudence, and texts of general nature concerned with some Islamic issues such as women, terrorism, Jihad, democracy, among others.

0205418 Principles of Law:

This course deals with the study of the theory of law in terms of the concept of law, its necessity, the characteristics of the legal rule and its official and interpretative sources, as well as the scope of law in terms of time, place and persons, as well as the interpretation and cancellation of law. It also deals with the theory of right in terms of the definition of right, its types, natural and legal persons of right, the subject of right, its sources, its use and proof.

Elective major requirements (9 hours)

0213117 Miracle of the Quran

This course aims to introduce the student to: the concept of miracle, its importance, the stages of the challenge, the history of its composition, the most prominent compositions , and to clarify the most important aspects of the miracle of the Qur'an , and the opinions of scholars on it .

This course includes: The concept of miracle and miracle, the importance of studying miracles , the difference between the miracle of the Prophet ﷺ and the miracles of previous prophets, the stages of the challenge, the history of research into miracles and their development, the aspects of miracles: rhetorical , legislative, scientific .With a focus on rhetorical linguistic miracles. Controls of miracles.

0213213Objective Interpretation

This course aims to introduce the student to thematic interpretation and its importance in the modern era. It also introduces him to the most prominent sources and references that serve research in the field of thematic interpretation, and how to benefit from them.

This course includes: the definition of thematic interpretation, its origins and stages of development, its importance and the most prominent works on it, the relationship of thematic interpretation to other methods of interpretation, types of thematic interpretation and the theoretical steps of research methods in it (the Qur'anic subject, the Qur'anic word, the thematic unity in the surah) and applications thereof, the science of occasions and its relationship to thematic interpretation .

(0213356) Methods of the interpreters

The course aims to identify the methods of interpreters, the origins of the science of interpretation, its development and its most important schools, and to introduce the most famous interpreters, their books and methods, both ancient and modern.

The course deals with: interpretation and exegesis and the difference between them, interpretation in the era of the Messenger - may God bless him and grant him peace - and the Companions - may God be pleased with them - and in the era of the Followers, and explaining the types of interpretation, such as interpretation by tradition and opinion, and the most prominent of their works, and explaining the danger of fabrication and Israelite stories in interpretation.

The student learns about the study of modern trends in interpretation, such as the rational, scientific, jurisprudential, social and rhetorical trends, with the study of selected models of these interpretations. The student also learns about the interpretations of some Islamic sects and their characteristics, such as Zaidi, Ibadi, Twelver Shiite, Sufi and extremist Batiniyya, and the study of methods. Deviant trends in contemporary interpretation.

One of the most important objectives of the course is for the student to understand the best approach to interpreting the Holy Quran.

0213354)) Islamic sects :

This course includes an introduction to Islamic sects, the history of the emergence of the most prominent sects, the division of sects into: doctrinal, political. Presentation of the most important opinions of Islamic sects and their criticism in light of the correct belief . Reference to some Islamic sects in the modern era, and reference to sects affiliated with Islam.

Ahaadeeth of Judgments :

This course aims to introduce the student to the legal evidence for practical rulings, and to train him on how to deduce and examine evidence, and reconcile the efforts of scholars in light of what they have deduced.

The material includes: studying and memorizing twenty selected hadiths on various topics, from the books (Subul al-Salam, Nayl al-Awtar) and other books of rulings .

0213438 Jurisprudential Rules:

This course aims to give the student a historical overview of the movement of establishing rules in the era of Islamic jurisprudence, and to form a jurisprudential faculty in the student to arrive at jurisprudential rulings, and to balance between them through jurisprudential rules, and to facilitate the memorization of jurisprudential branches and details by memorizing their rules, and to demonstrate the ability of Islamic jurisprudence to establish general theories that meet the need to establish systems and legislation.

This article includes: explaining the origin and importance of these rules, listing them, explaining their sources, the most famous books on them, explaining their meanings, types and levels, mentioning examples of each jurisprudential rule, understanding the jurisprudential branches in light of them, and referring them back to their controls.

0213343 Contemporary doctrines of thought

This course aims to introduce the student to the most famous contemporary intellectual schools that originated in Europe, and to enable students to identify them and confront them with the Islamic faith through critical study, and to explain the methods of intellectual invasion of the Islamic world.

The subject includes: Talking about the European Renaissance and philosophical schools (rational, sensual, experimental, critical): their emergence, origins, and Islam's position on them. Intellectual invasion: its history, dangers, and methods. The most prominent intellectual movements: Marxism, existentialism, pragmatism.

0213444 Comparative Religions:

This course aims to introduce students to the origins of major religions and enable them to respond to their beliefs in the light of Islam.

Contents of the course: The concept of religion, the study of comparative religion, religion among Jews, knowledge of the origins of Judaism and its holy books, and their view of man and other religions. Study of religion among Christians, knowledge of the origins of their faith, their various sects, and their holy books, monotheistic movements in the history of Christianity. Study of the major religions of India: Buddhism, Hinduism.

0213439 Contemporary Financial Transactions:

This course aims to introduce the student to the characteristics of the transaction system in Islam, and to explain the legal ruling in dealing with emerging issues in a manner consistent with the objectives of Islamic law.

It includes: defining and explaining moral rights, private spaces and insurance, and the Islamic alternative to it. It also includes the subject of money in terms of: its origin, change in its value, financial and commercial papers (stocks and bonds), bills of exchange, checks, and bonds, Islamic banking transactions: (bank deposits, transfers, Murabaha for the purchase orderer, letters of guarantee, documentary credits, new forms of sales, and types of usury).

0213355 Public Speaking:

This course aims to introduce the student to the basics of public speaking and teaching, how to prepare a sermon or lesson, and how to perform them. Enabling the student to deliver impromptu sermons and lessons, to work on raising the level of public speaking and religious teaching.

The course includes: Definition of rhetoric and its characteristics, its divisions, and its etiquette. Study of the orator as a personality and culture. A brief overview of the most important sciences related to rhetoric: such as logic, sociology, psychology, and rhetorical metrics. Methods of influencing the audience and directing public opinion. A textual study of some speeches from different eras. With practical application and group evaluation.

0213151 Advocacy and media:

This article aims to explain the importance of the media in the Islamic call, and to establish interest in the various media in the call to Islam.

Contents: Introduction to the media and its importance from an Islamic perspective, its means, methods, goals, characteristics, effects, fields, communication and media, the communication process and its elements, the relationship between the sender and the receiver, methods of persuasion in the Holy Qur'an, a comparison between Islamic advocacy and media.

0213352 Advocacy and Preachers

This course aims to introduce the student to the concept of da'wah, its history, and methods, and to identify the pillars of da'wah (the preacher, the one being called, the da'wah).

Its most important contents: Studying the meaning of the call, and the different approaches in the Islamic call (Sufi, Salafi, educational, rational, political). The most prominent issues of the Islamic call, group work, enjoining good and forbidding evil, trials and patience, good advice. Studying the caller: his qualities, functions, and structure. Studying the one called: who he is, his rights and duties, how to call him, and studying the sources of the call and the method of understanding it.

0101334 Methods of teaching Islamic education:

The subject includes the objectives of Islamic education and the role of the school in educating the young generation in an Islamic manner, methods of teaching Islamic education, characteristics of the Islamic education teacher and the competencies that must be available in him, analysis of Islamic education curricula in the primary education stage (first cycle), planning Islamic education lessons, practical training in teaching skills, listening and its etiquette in the Holy Quran, methods of teaching branches of Islamic education in the primary education stage (first cycle).

College Compulsory Requirements (3 hours):

0213102 Human Rights in Islam:

This article aims to deepen the sense of belonging to Islam through its precedence in establishing human rights, and to emphasize the uniqueness of Islamic law in its conception of human rights, and to explain how these rights came in harmony with human nature, and stem from God Almighty's honoring of man, and His making him His vicegerent on earth.

The content of the article includes: defining the right in general, explaining its divisions, and explaining the rights that Islamic law has guaranteed to man (such as his right to life, justice, equality, education, freedom, work, ownership, and forming a family, etc.), with a statement of the measures that the law has put in place to guarantee and preserve those rights, and in return, a statement of the duties that the law has decided and obligated upon man, in relation to the rights that he enjoys.

Subjects offered by the Department of Islamic Studies to students of the Faculty of Law

8 021323 Personal status law - Marriage and Divorce - :

This course aims to introduce the student to the legal provisions related to regulating family relations in light of the current Personal Status Law.

Its topics include: Marriage contract: definition of marriage and explanation of its ruling, the wisdom of its legitimacy, engagement and the rulings on withdrawing from it, pillars of the marriage contract, conditions of the contract formula, rights arising from the marriage contract, shared rights: inheritance, enjoyment, proof of lineage...), the wife's rights: dowry, maintenance, justice with one wife, and wives in polygamy... . The husband's rights: obedience, and decision-making in the home... . Dissolution of the marriage contract: divorce: wisdom, its legitimacy and its types, khul' and its rulings, separation between spouses for reasons that warrant it, the effects arising from the dissolution of the marriage contract in terms of waiting period and childbirth maintenance.

239 0213 Personal Status Law - Wills and Inheritance - :

This course aims to familiarize the student with the provisions related to wills and inheritance.

The article includes: Study of the will: its definition, ruling, types, pillars and conditions, its invalidity and revocation, its acceptance and rejection, the conditions of the executor, the legatee and the legatee, the conflict of wills, the obligatory will.

Inheritance: definition, types , causes, pillars, conditions , impediments, rights related to the estate, Owners of fixed shares, agnates, relatives , exclusion, accounting, correcting issues, compensation, rejection, copies , inheritance of a lost fetus , exclusion.

0213230 Principles of Islamic Jurisprudence

This course aims to introduce the student to the science of the principles of jurisprudence, its subject, its origins, methods of writing in it, and its purpose.

The material includes: an introduction that defines the science of the principles of jurisprudence, then the ruling: (its types and divisions, validity and invalidity, permission and determination), the book: (its argument, its miracle, and its translation, the actions of the Messenger - may God bless him and his family and grant them peace) Legislation, general and specific, their terms and their authority, meanings and their types, terms and their uses, the continuous Sunnah, the famous, the individual, a general idea about prepositions and meanings.

The article includes: commands and prohibitions, an explanation of each, their forms, and their significance for Islamic rulings. Consensus: analogy, then an explanation of the subsidiary evidence from which Islamic rulings are derived, which are: Istihsan (approval), public interest, blocking the means, custom, and istiṣhāb (presumption of continuity).